Comics from Stern's show to appear at Orlando's Tabu

Perhaps someone you know or love is a Howard Stern fan. So be a pal and kindly read this item to him (or her, maybe).

That's because "Killers of Comedy," featuring "comedians" known for their stints on Stern's Sirius radio show, will perform starting at 8:30 p.m. Friday at downtown Orlando's Tabu Dance Club, 46. N. Orange Ave.

Now you really can do your little Howard fans a favor by informing them that Tabu, while a dance club, does not allow the kind of dancing they might be accustomed to. Carefully and succinctly explain they shouldn't expect a lap dance from the nice wait staff.

If your Howard fan appears indifferent with this tidbit, let them know there are several hangouts on Orange Blossom Trail they might wish to visit after the show. Maybe you can find information for them online.

Anyway, here is a list of the performers and a little bit about why they are so popular among Stern listeners.

- The Rev. Bob Levy, who won Stern's "World's Meanest Listener Contest" in 2002 and lived in his ex-wife's basement.
- Sal Governale, who claims to have been a former Wall Street stockbroker whose dream was realized when he was allowed to make phony phone calls on Stern shows.
- Richard Christy, a former death metal musician, now known for saying disturbing things in what his publicist calls a "respectful Midwestern drawl."
- Yucko the Clown, who claims he hasn't washed his clown suit in years.
- Shuli, a "reporter" for Howard 100 News, which covers Stern-related events.
- Beetlejuice, known for having an undersized head and oversized teeth.

Tickets are $25. For $50, Stern fans can enjoy a meet-and-greet with the stars.
